REMEMBER! REMEMBER!

ILLIDGE'S

IS THE CHEAPEST BOOT AND SHOE DEPOT IN THE COLONY.

COME where "Cheap Boots" wait thee,
And when cash elates thee,
Oh, then remember ILLIDGE;
Where the charge is cheapest
And for joy thou leapest,
Then still remember ILLIDGE.

Other shops are selling,
Tickets hung round telling,
Envious hearts are swelling
To crush thy good friend ILLIDGE;
But when they sell the lowest,
Well—full well thou knowest
They cannot rival ILLIDGE.

Queen of the Southern Ocean,
Hear, while with deep emotion,
A patriot's true devotion
I pay the noble ILLIDGE;
No shoeless sons or daughters
Need now disgrace thy waters—
Thanks to our best friend, ILLIDGE.

THE CENSUS.

IN taking notice, so prominently as we have done, of Avocato's letter, we have (we are informed) done that mistaken individual too much honour. A gentleman, who has adopted the pseudonym of Cato the Censor, writes to us in very severe terms respecting the other Cato (the delinquent abovementioned), whom he condemns as displaying an entire want of patriotism, justice, and self-respect, and all the other stoical virtues, and, consequently, unfit to be enregistered at all on the rolls of the Census: by which, we suppose, he means, unfit to live. Our censure did not go quite so far as the sentence of this stern Roman. Another correspondent, who writes an elegant angular slantendicular hand, on gilt note paper, and subscribes herself Provocata, has, to our surprise, sent us the following extract from the Quarterly Review, No. CLI., p. 38. It is the most complete business transaction we have had with a lady. She informs us that she has read the whole of that article, on the Census of 1841, from page 11 to page 38 of that publication, except four or five lines of Latin here and there, which she says have no business to be introduced into English composition: and, having compared the following extract with the original, we find the figures and everything else quite correct. "'We expect to have but few female readers of our present article, and of such as get to the end of it, vel duo, vel nemo; but as we have been making much mention of the value of such [statistical] disquisitions in correcting vulgar prejudices [such as Avocato's], we shall conclude by noticing how contradicted by fact is that of imputing to females especially an undue anxiety to conceal their age [ages]. For in the Report of the Ages of Persons in Great Britain (p. 475), it is stated, that of persons whose ages had not been specified, the females were 13,794, and the males were 132,481.' Avocato says," continues Provocata, "that numbers of his acquaintance, indignant at the illegal query, have given untrue statements. I do not doubt it. These old bachelors (of which class Avocato and his numbers of acquaintance alluded to consist, as any body may from his style of writing conclude) are very unwilling to reveal the extent of their withered uselessness. Too selfish and too pusillanimous to undertake the customary duties of social life, they cannot be expected to be very scrupulous of the truth when they are asked how long they have been cumberers of the ground. The only consolation they enjoy is, to cast slurs and imputations on the unmarried persons of the other sex, whose estimable qualities they have been unable to appreciate, but who may congratulate themselves that they are rid of such fellows. Happily, however, for the public weal generally, and for the purposes of the Census in particular, very few of them are householders, and their ages will be returned pretty near the truth, in spite of their dastardly souls." We certify that Madame Provocata is a femme couverte, and entitled to speak out.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT.

INSOLVENCY JURISDICTION.

WEDNESDAY.

BEFORE His Honor the CHIEF JUSTICE.

IN RE JOHN LORD, EXPARTE THE BANK OF AUSTRALIA.

This was an application by the Bank of Australia for an attachment against Robert Craig, the trustee of the estate, for not having filed a plan of distribution; and the case was argued before me by counsel, on both sides, on Wednesday last, when it was adjourned to this day for final decision. The facts, as far as I can gather from the proceedings, are as follows:—In March, 1844, the trustee filed a paper showing, or intending to show, the receipt and payments in the estate, and the names of the creditors entitled to receive dividends, together with the amount of the debts which they had respectively proved. This plan of distribution, if it is so to be considered, was never formally disallowed, but the then sitting Judge, Mr. Justice Burton, intimated his opinion that it was incorrectly framed, inasmuch as it ought to have included the joint creditors in the estate of Lord and Haslingden, as well as the separate creditors in the private estate of Lord. The trustee, in consequence of that intimation, filed a similar paper writing, made in accordance with Mr. Justice Burton's suggestion; he delayed to do this, however, until the month of November following, and the Bank of Australia thereupon objected to the plan, and raised a question for the decision of the Court—whether the English principle was not the correct one,—viz., that the separate estate of an insolvent should be answerable only in the first instance to his separate creditors? The three Judges, being myself, Mr. Justice Dickinson, and Mr. Justice A'Beckett, held, that the English rule was the binding one; and the trustee within a few weeks afterwards brings to the office of the Chief Commissioner a new paper writing, made in accordance with the principle of this decision. He left it, however, merely in the office, and caused no notice of it to be advertised, as it was his duty to have done under the Insolvent Act, sec. 88. In point of fact also, this paper, although intended doubtless to be treated as a plan of distribution and account, is of the most informal and irregular description. The account is not properly entitled, and there is no date assigned to any one item; neither is there any statement such as sec. 87 of the Act requires as to outstanding debts or property. Secondly, there is strictly no plan at all, but a mere list of creditors, with a memorandum at the foot of the amount of dividends payable on their claims, at a date which is left blank; and there is no statement as to preferable creditors. Each of the three papers shows a balance for distribution exceeding £900, and the second and third papers state the amount at £1044 7s. 4d. From December, 1844, up to February, 1846, not one of the creditors has thought fit to make any application in the matter, neither has the trustee. The latter now states by affidavit that he is anxious to file a new plan, including a claim recently made by the Crown of a preferable nature, amounting to £300 and upwards; as to which he desires to take the opinion of the Court. Under these circumstances, I felt it my duty to direct, at the termination of the argument, that the money in the trustee's hands or under his control should be paid into this Court, to await the final order of distribution. I have made that order for the protection of the creditors of the estate, and I entertain no doubt whatever of the authority of this Court to make such an order. The Insolvent Act, section 81, directs that the trustee shall pay the moneys of the estate into some bank, but there is nothing in the act to prevent the Court from taking due order for the further security of such moneys, whenever it shall see just cause for so doing. The power of the Court in bankruptcy to make such orders, and generally to control the acts of the trustees as officers of the Court, will be found to be ample for the protection of the parties interested: and I shall now merely refer on this point to the cases cited in the first volume of Mr. Montague's Treatise, p.p. 342, 564, and especially the cases of exparte Cowlan, 3 Barnwell and Alderson, p.p. 128, 129; and exparte Rowton, 17 Vesey, p.p. 426, 432, as well as to the several cases there cited. The order made, therefore, on Wednesday last, I now repeat. I proceed to consider whether I ought in this case to grant an attachment, supposing the Court possesses the power. I shall not determine the last mentioned point, for it is unnecessary to do so, as I am clearly of opinion that no attachment ought to go under any circumstances in this case, there being on the evidence no contempt, either committed, or, so far as I perceive, designed. There are three documents presented by a trustee; most irregular ones certainly, and most carelessly and negligently framed in every respect; but still intended to be a compliance with the Act, section 87,—and the creditors have shown extreme apathy in not coming here before, during fourteen months, if they had anything to complain of. I shall allow the trustee, and shall direct him to file and duly advertise notice of a new plan of distribution in this estate, specifying the amount divisible, and stating what preferable claims there are, if any, and who are the concurrent creditors; together with the amount of dividend which will be payable to them, having regard to such preferable claim or claims, if any. The trustee will also file a proper account, as required by that section; for these are separate and distinct documents, as I have often had occasion to point out. Such account and plan are to be filed within twenty-one days from this date, and the trustee will pay the £1044 7s. 6d. into the hands of the Chief Commissioner within seven days from this date. On the coming in of the plan, the Crown, or any other party interested, may apply to this Court for the confirmation or alteration of such plan, as they may be advised. I will make no order as to costs, because I think that each party should pay his own. The trustee has evinced a most culpable indifference to the interests committed to his care, and the creditors on the other hand have made an application which they have failed to sustain.

The Court then adjourned till Wednesday next.

DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS FOR MONDAY.

James Chapman, a first meeting, at twelve.

NEW INSOLVENT.

The estate of Thomas Carew, of Lower George-street, Sydney, grocer, was sequestrated yesterday. The schedule showed that the estate was indebted in the sum of £ 28 4s. 8½d.; and that the assets were—personal property, £12; outstanding debts, £6 12s. 0½d.; outstanding bad debts, £2 15s. Balance deficiency, £120 4s. 8½d.—Clark Irving, Official Assignee.

The following intimation was also appended to the schedule:—

"I attribute my insolvency to the law expenses incurred by my commencing an action against a person residing in Castlereagh-street, but which I lost by want of proof. The attorney for the plaintiff in that case has informed me that he intends to put an execution in my house, and to save him the expenses I am induced to sequestrate my estate.

POLICE COURT BUSINESS.—FRIDAY.—There were thirty-seven cases on the lists, of which eleven were for drunkenness, two men and one woman were discharged; a female was ordered to pay 5s. or sit for two hours in the stocks; all the others were ordered to pay each 11s. or to go twelve hours to the cells. There were twenty-two names on the list of miscellaneous charges—three of which were old cases, viz., Timothy Duigan and Patrick Gately, for uttering forged orders and obtaining money and goods under false pretences, and Anne Unwin, for stealing 15s. 6d. from her master's premises, were all committed for trial. The nineteen new cases on the same list were disposed of as follows:—A female, for an assault, a man, for protection, another man, for assaulting a female, a female, for maliciously destroying property, a female, for a breach of the peace, and another for being drunk and using obscene language,—all discharged; two men, on suspicion of shooting three cows, a man, on suspicion of stealing a hat, a man for a breach of the peace, were all remanded; John Doyle, for drunkenness and indecency, was sent three months to gaol; Edward Wilson, for being illegally on Captain Lamb's premises, was bound to the peace in £10, with sureties in £5 each, for twelve months; John Billing, a seaman belonging to the General Hewitt, for assaulting George Hart, an apprentice on board the said vessel, by lacerating his face with his fist on shipboard, was ordered to pay a fine of £4, and 4s. 6d. costs, or to go one month to gaol; George Munro, for being drunk and assaulting a constable, was fined 10s, and 2s. 6d. costs, or to go ten days to gaol; Patrick Fleming for a like offence, was fined 20s., and 2s. 6d. costs, or to go to gaol for fourteen days; Justin Howard, for stealing female's wearing apparel, was committed for trial, and Mary Cain for a breach of the peace bound to keep the same in the usual sum of £10 with two sureties in £5 each for twelve months; and Timothy Duigan, for an assault, paid a fine of 5s. with 4s. 6d. costs; a convict under sentence on the same list, had his name carried over to the summons list, which contained four cases, namely—Edward Holmes v. Patrick O'Brien Murphy, free, and Peter Mahoney, his assigned servant, for an assault, was postponed till Wednesday. There were two other cases of assault on the same list, one of which was dismissed, as no parties appeared; and in the other, on the ground that the proof was defective. The case of John Henry Nixon v. Timothy Driscoll for fraud, was dismissed by order of the Mayor. The Court adjourned at half-past two till nine to-day.

THE WEATHER.—As the sun enters the sign ♈ (Aries), to-day, at fifty minutes past nine in the morning, the same instant will be the middle of the Autumnal Equinox in the Antarctic or Southern Hemisphere, which tends to account for the unsettled state of the weather during the last fourteen days, and shows that probably during the next fortnight the weather will be very variable, especially as regards wind and rain.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE markets generally throughout the week have been exceedingly dull, and to effect sales to any amount is impossible; the trade generally, being pretty well stocked, do not feel inclined to make further purchases, which is to be attributed to the falling off in every department of the country trade; and it is likely that business will rule dull for some time. The sales made during the week call for no comment whatever, being confined to immediate wants only.

SYDNEY MARKETS.—FRIDAY.

WHEAT.—The unsettled state of the weather has kept the farmers from bringing much to market, and twenty-five loads only paid dues during the week. The prices have ranged from 4s. 10d. to 5s. 4d., but as this latter price will prevent exportation from Launceston to London, and turn it towards this place, we may soon expect a large supply from Van Diemen's Land.

FLOUR.—This article is firm at £13 per ton, cash.

BREAD of the best quality sells generally at 3½d.

BRAN.—In demand at 1s. 2d. per bushel.

OATS AND BARLEY.—There are none for sale, wholesale, in the market. The dealers are charging for the best oats 5s. per bushel retail, and from 3s. to 3s. 6d. for sound barley.

MAIZE.—Within the present week there has been a great inquiry after sound maize; as the weather has been very unfavourable, those in possession of what is in the market have taken advantage, and run the price up so high as nearly to equal that of wheat, charging from 3s. 9d. to 4s. 6d., which has been paid by the dealers, and yesterday morning, some of the holders of samples at the wharfs were asking 5s. per bushel. The retailers are charging from 4s. 3d. to 4s. 9d. per bushel. It is expected that unless a supply arrive during the ensuing week, the prices just quoted will advance still higher, but it is conceded by all parties that as soon as an arrival or two (which are expected) takes place these prices will fall as rapidly as they have risen.

HAY.—By noon yesterday about ninety-five loads had paid dues to the lessee of the Campbell-street market. A few loads of inferior quality were sold at from 6s. to 7s. 6d per cwt. The prices for marketable good hay ranged from 8s. to 9s. 6d. per cwt. The general price has been about 8s. 6d. per cwt. Sound well cured hay is likely to rise in price for the next three months.

STRAW.—Twenty-four loads have been received since last report. The prices have ranged from 2s. 6d. to 3s. per cwt. The average price is 3s. 10d. per cwt.

GREEN BEDDING.—Thirteen loads have passed through the Campbell-street market. The prices given have been from 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. per load. The general price has been 4s. 3d. per load.

GRASS.—Twenty-three loads have paid dues since last report. The wholesale price has been from 9d. to 1s. per dozen; the retail prices are from 1s. to 1s. 3d. per single dozen.

CATTLE AND SHEEP remain as last reported, with a tendency to advance in price.

HORSES.—Six head have been sold at the pound; three inferior animals were sold with difficulty at from £5 to £7 10s. per head, three superior horses were sold,—one for £13, one for £14, and one for £15 15s.

MILCH COWS.—There is a great demand for good milch cows. Thirty-six head have been sold at the pound, for which from £1 1s. to £5 10s. have been obtained. The average price of a good milker and a calf under six months old is about £4 or £4 4s.

FED CALVES.—Sixteen head have been sold at the Cattle Market, to the Sydney butchers. The lowest price taken was 6s. 6d. for ill-condition animals, and the highest price realized was £2 for a very fine bull calf. The general price is about 27s. 6d. for sound healthy animals.

PIGS.—About seventy head have been sold at the pound. The prices given have ranged from 2½d. to 3½d. per lb. on the weight of the four quarters; a litter of eight small, healthy, and plump store pigs was on sale yesterday at 14s. per head.

VEGETABLES.—Twenty-five loads have paid dues during the week, the prices remain as last quoted. There is some very fine spinach on sale, grown by Baptist, at 6d. per dish.

POULTRY.—Nine loads have paid dues; the prices remain as reported last week. Eggs are now from 10d. to 1s. 2d, per dozen.

POTATOES AND DRIED ONIONS are at present very plentiful; the former are from £5 to £6 10s. per ton; the dealers are charging from 7s. to 8s. 6d. per cwt. The best dried onions are from £10 to £12 per ton, and from 14s. to 18s. per cwt.

FRUIT.—About forty loads have paid dues, consisting principally of apples, pears, quinces, lemons, and grapes; the latter are from 4d. to 9d, per lb., wholesale, and from 6d. to 1s per lb. retail; the prices of the others as reported last week.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—About one ton of cheese has been received, and purchased by the market dealers at from 7d. to 8d. per lb. It is retailing at from 9d. to 1s. per lb. Forty-seven cwt. of butter paid dues, and was readily sold to the dealers at from 1s. to 1s. 1½d. per lb. The best fresh butter is 2s. per lb., and the best salt butter 1s. 6d. per lb., retail.

There are no alterations in the prices of cedar, hardwood, or other building materials, worth reporting.

The same remark applies to coals, firewood, &c.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

GOULBURN RACES.

OUR races commenced under the most favourable auspices as to weather, which was as fine as the most fastidious valetudinarian could have wished. The first race in importance, as to the value of the stakes, was the Town Plate of £40, for which the following horses were entered.

W. Gillard's Nell Gwynne..Blue
Alexander Long's Bloomsbury..Black and Yellow, Red Cap.
Mr Reid's Bolivar..Black and White, Black Cap.

For this race Nell Gwynne had all along been the favourite, but on her appearance at the stand it was evident to her well wishers that she had been too much trained, nevertheless it was considered just possible that she might realize the opinions of her backers; but the result proved that these expectations were doomed to be frustrated. At the word off, the three were together, but at the flat Bloomsbury, beautifully ridden by Patrick, gave notice to his friends that he intended winning the heat and no mistake, which despite the endeavours of Gillespie on the favourite, he succeeded in doing, the mare being a good second. Bolivar, though ridden by an old experienced jockey (Spinks), was no where. The second heat was eventually won by Bloomsbury, to the great satisfaction of Alick, whose friends drank to his and Bloomsbury's future success, at the Caledonian, after the business of the day was over.

The second race, the Maiden Plate for £20, was contended for by Mr. Wright's Paddy Whack..Black and Yellow, Red Cap.

James Law's, Matilda..Pink and Blue.
Mr. Simon's Young Othello..White and Blue.

The betting on this race was between the chestnut horse Paddy Whack, ridden by Patrick, and the mare ridden by Richard Long, Young Othello being thought nothing of, ridden by Joseph Webster, a rising and promising rider; to the surprise of all however, and to none more than his owner, our respected townsman, Young Othello, like his great Shaksperian prototype, gallantly carried off his Desdemona, the Maiden Plate.

The Third Race, for Hacks, £7 10s., was well filled, the following horses having entered—

Mr. Bennett's Otho.
Mr. Moses's Gustavus.
Mr. Simon's Bawley.
Mr. Mark's Harkaway.
Dr. Waugh's Hookey Walker.

After a spirited contest, in which our Old Cart Horse cut out work for the whole team; the first and second heats were awarded to Mr. Simon's Bawley, to that gentleman's extreme satisfaction, his old and gallant grey being a general favourite.

This ended the first day's sports, and the company left the course highly gratified with the amusements of the day, to lengthen it however, by devoting a few hours to "tripping it on the light fantastic toe" at the various houses open for that purpose.

The Second Day's Races brought into the field our respected Braidwood friends, whose horses, in fine condition, gave promise of a golden return for the expense and trouble taken in bringing them to Goulburn.

The day's sports commenced with the Innkeepers' Purse of £30, for which prize Mr. Andrew Badgery, whose love of horse-racing is proverbial, and who is always ready to respond liberally in support of the turf, and whose urbane and gentlemanly manners have gained him the respect of all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance, entered his celebrated mare, Lady Morgan, putting upon her back, in tartan plaid, George Higginson, his no less celebrated jockey. Her competitors in the race were—

Mr. Golden's Wait-a-while... Green and White.
Mr. Mark's Conservative....Black and Blue Cap.
Mr. Bennett's Grenadier ....Plaid Cap and Jacket.

In the first heat Lady Morgan had it all her own way, so much so, that orders to halt were given to the Grenadier, while Wait-a-while was told to wait a little longer, and Conservative became a Liberal, all giving way, out of courtesy of course to her Ladyship, while she leisurely walked over for the second heat.

The next race, as per advertisement, was to have been the Ladies' Purse, for £20, but it not filling, according to the prescribed regulation of the Stewards, was postponed to the following day.

The third race, for two year olds, for £20, was then competed for as a Trial Stakes, by the following Horses, viz.:—

Mr. Thompson's Jackey..Blue and Purple
Mr. Kennedy's Ginger..Black and Red Cap.
Mr. Levy's Forlorn Hope..Blue.

Thompson's Jackey took the first heat, Forlorn Hope having bolted, and Ginger not being spicey enough for the occasion; after some discussion respecting the Forlorn Hope not complying with the rules of bolters, he was drawn, and Jackey walked over for the Stakes, a suitable Prize for his owner.

THURSDAY.

This day was intended to have been set apart for private matches, rural sports, &c., &c., but owing to the racing for the Ladies' Purse being postponed from the previous day, and the Stewards having determined upon rescinding that race and substituting a new Race for £20, called the Helter Skelter Stakes, this race took precedence of the sports of the day, and the following horses came to the scratch—all looking well—and much anxiety was shewn as to the result of this novelty on the intermediate day of the Races.

Mr. A. Badgery's Lady Morgan..Tartan Plaid.
Mr. Mark's Conservative..Black, Blue Cap.
Mr. A. Long's Bloomsbury..Black and Yellow, Red Cap.

Lady Morgan, in the first heat, came beautifully in, leading the others in her wake in first-rate style, Bloomsbury cried "Peccavi" and went to his corn, but his appearance in the town, decorated with ribbons, caused a report, which was for a time believed, that he had won the race; however, it was soon after ascertained that Conservative had been drawn, and Lady Morgan again walked over for the prize; the day's amusements concluded with pig racing, climbing the greased pole for a hat on its top, which being blown off by the wind was literally torn to atoms in the scramble for it; an elegant whip was offered by a spirited friend to the sports, but did not fill.

THIRD DAY.

The First Race this day was for the Tradesmen's Purse of £25, and an excellent race it was, betting being five to four on Mr. Andrew Badgery's Jumbuck horse, who was not new to the Goulburnites, for his fame had gone before him, and many were glad of an opportunity of seeing him run The following horses started for this race.

Mr. A. Badgery's Jumbuck..Tartan Plaid.
Mr. Simons's Bawley..Purple and Blue.
Mr. Bennett's Grenadier..Plaid Cap and Jacket.
Mr. A. Long's Bloomsbury..Black and Yellow, Red Cap.

The first heat was a waiting one till they came to the rising ground, when Bloomsbury let out, closely waited upon by the Jumbuck; at the distance the work got sharp, and whip and spur for the heat, which was won by the Jumbuck, Bloomsbury close to his shoulder; Bawley came third, Grenadier last, as rear guard. The next heat was warmly contested between the Jumbuck and the Soldier, and at the time while running over the flats, any odds were offered on Jumbuck, who looked as though booked to win; but on coming to the trial spot, the rising ground, the superior bottom of the Grenadier gave him the advantage to the distance-post, from which point he made a slashing race for it, and won the heat. Even betting. Jumbuck appeared to have done his utmost; Grenadier scarce turned.

After the usual time, these horses started for the last heat, (Bawley and Bloomsbury having been drawn after the first heat); Jumbuck got the start, but a dexterous turn of Byrne upon the Soldier brought him upon an equality, and they went together down the hill at a good pace; at the flat it was any body's race; 100 to 80 offered on Jumbuck, but no takers; the rising ground being now taken by both horses, Jumbuck began to fail, and though well ridden by Higginson, who did all he could for him, was unable to surmount the hill in time to prevent the Grenadier making good play from the distance post, and winning the race in capital style, amidst the cheers of the company, which, however, were not withheld from the Jumbuck when his jockey appeared after weighing.

The Second Race—A hurdle race for £15, did not fill.

The Third Race.—A hack hurdle race for £7 10s., was next contested for by the following hacks.—

James Law's Matilda
Mr. Reid's Bolivar
Mr. Doyle's Humbug
Mr. Day's White-legged Pony
Mr. Bennett's Black Bess
Mr. Mandleson's Prince.

This was a lively stirring race, full of fun and bustle; it was any body's race to the last—for all had one or two falls; all jibed at the leaps, more or less; all were determined game riders, and afforded much sport. The scene was very animated from the great number of equestrians who followed the line of the race. At the first leap Humbug's rider was thrown, but soon picked himself up, and came over the last of the three leaps in time to overtake Prince, who had the lead of him, but who could not proceed from the circumstance of his jockey hanging on by his nose, to the infinite mirth of all present. White-legged Pony came in first, Bolivar second, Humbug third, Prince fourth, Black Bess fifth, and Matilda last.

After a short respite, the whole lot started again, with the same results as to jibing and tumbling; but not so with respect to the placing of the horses, for Prince and Matilda ran a dead heat; Humbug again third, Black Bess fourth, White-legged Pony fifth, and Bolivar last.

Third heat.—All alive and full of excitement, Humbug's rider having been severely hurt by a fall in the last heat, was obliged to give up his saddle to another rider, who, however, met with a little accident, together with several others this heat; amongst the worst falls was that of Massingham, on Bolivar, who was put hors de combat by a jostling at the last leap, whereby he was heavily thrown, and one or two horses and riders coming pell-mell over him, he was unable to rise, and was taken off the course to obtain medical assistance. This heat was won by Black Bess, whose rider (Young Gaffer) showed much nerve and judgment.

Fourth heat.—This was well contested up to the last leap, over which Gaffer came with a splendid leap on Bess, closely followed by Prince, and between these two a hard race commenced for the winning post, which was cleverly won by Gaffer, who is verily a young Nimrod.

It was too late now to run for the Beaten Stakes—the last prize, which was consequently postponed till the following day.

SATURDAY.

The last prize was this day run for, namely—the Beaten Stakes of £15, by the following horses—

Mr. Simon's Bawley..Purple and blue
Mr. A. Badgery's, Jumbuck..Tartan plaid
Mr. Mark's Conservative..Black blue cap
Mr. Gillard's Nell Gwynne..blue

The first heat was taken by Bawley, Jumbuck coming in second.

The second was a dead heat between Conservative and Nell.

The third was again won by old Bawley, ridden by young Simmons, whose utmost skill was called into requisition, when riding against the experienced jockey on Jumbuck.

NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR.

(From our various Correspondents.)

MORETON BAY.

MARCH 17.—The steam-ship Thistle arrived here on the 13th instant, and sails to-day with a full cargo of wool. She reports having seen the schooner Petrel off the River Tweed on the 14th; as also a large square-sterned long boat or cutter ashore, bottom up, near Point Danger. The pilot, at Amity Point, will most probably have learnt what she is by my next communication. The barque Golden Fleece was lying at the outer bar when the Thistle came up. The return of the population, according to the census lately taken for North and South Brisbane, gives 992 souls, including the military detachment; the increase of population in the town has been scarcely any the last two years, in fact we have already too many here; their services would become much more valuable were they to take to the bush, and lend assistance to tend a flock of sheep. The weather the last month has been unusually warm and sultry, with no rain, causing a complete stoppage in garden vegetation, although I am happy to say the interior localities continue to possess plenty of feed for the stock; less rain has fallen the last summer than for some years past. The blacks are playing the mischief with the corn planted in the vicinity of the township; watch it as you may, the rascals manage to get into it, and speedily walk off with full cargoes. At Breakfast Creek the people have to keep a strict watch night and day. The poor Germans at Eagle Farm are unable to grow any for their family uses; the vagabonds take away all they plant, not excepting their crop of sweet potatoes this year. To small settlers or agriculturists the blacks are greater pests than a storm of locusts—they are a sore annoyance to the poor industrious man.

The members of the Church of England residing in Brisbane, I am sorry to say, have, at a meeting convened on the 13th instant, passed various resolutions, showing their utter want of confidence in the ministry of the present clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Gregor; a deputation of four waited upon the reverend gentleman, for the purpose of furnishing him with a copy of the resolutions passed at the meeting, and requesting his reply to one of them particularly, wherein he is requested to resign his charge. Mr. Gregor merely referred the deputation to the Bishop.

A poor man named John Dawson was unfortunately drowned a short time since in crossing the river, at a place called Bed Bank. It appears the poor fellow, with several other persons, was getting over a lot of cattle, and that after swimming over himself, his mare drifted away from the landing place, and in his attempt to get her out he was also carried away by the current a long way down the river, although from his being an excellent swimmer no fears were entertained for his safety; but it is supposed the cramp took him, for he disappeared under the water after cooing once or twice. He has left a widow near her confinement and two helpless children to mourn his sudden loss. To the honour of the Brisbanites subscriptions were immediately set on foot for her benefit, and a very handsome sum raised, by which means she may be enabled to obtain a respectable livelihood for her family.

The boiling down operations have again commenced at Kangaroo Point, and it is anticipated that a large quantity of fat cattle will this year be salted down and tried out at that place. Report speaks in the most favourable terms of Mr. Campbell's meat cured the past winter, and from that gentleman's knowledge of the business, and the means he has in his extensive and complete place of work to carry on operations, no doubt he will this season carry away the palm in that line.

A sale of government land takes place to-morrow, at the Court House, Brisbane, but I am of opinion but little of it will find purchasers; there is quite land enough already sold in the township—more by two thirds than has been built upon or improved. Moreton Bay being at present purely a squatting district, there is no stimulus for a populous town at Brisbane or elsewhere; half the town in the dull seasons is employed in watching what the other half does.

The annual race meeting has been fixed to take place on the new Race Course, at the new farm, North Brisbane, on the 26th, 27th, and 28th of May, when it is supposed some good sport will be witnessed.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—In your journal of yesterday there appears a letter signed "John Arbuckle," in which the writer makes it known that I wish to detract from his merit as a workman, and to take to myself the credit of having executed work which he states to be performed by himself. I will, therefore, thank you by stating that I gave a gentleman belonging to your office a list of the articles I supplied, and which were made under my own personal inspection; but as Mr. A. states that the articles of colonial manufacture were comparatively small in comparison to those imported, I subjoin a list of some of the goods furnished by me, and which were made in my establishment (the imported goods consisted of 18 chairs only), viz., carved rosewood and easy chairs covered in satin damask, thirty-six handsomely carved chairs in morocco leather, now used in the dining-room and room of the Executive Council, together with a pair of rising tables, supported with carved lions' paws, each forming either one or three sets at pleasure by means of internal machinery, together with various other articles both decorative and useful, too numerous to mention, with which I have been favoured by His Excellency.

With respect to the chairs of the Legislative Council, I do not claim any credit for them, therefore cannot attempt to derogate from Mr. A.'s ability to execute them.

Gentlemen, your insertion of the foregoing will oblige

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—As you have in-variably evinced a desire to promo[illegible] in every way the best interests of all [illegible] of men in our community, I take the liberty, in consequence of there being no Medical As[illegible]ation or Publication here, to request that you will have the goodness to insert the following in your valuable paper.

I am gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,

TO THE MEDICAL PROFESSION OF AUSTRALIA.

GENTLEMEN,—My experience as a physician in Sydney and Melbourne, and a pretty extensive acquaintance with country practitioners, have convinced me that it is the earnest desire of the great body of the medical men in Australia, not to permit those honourable usages to which our brethren in Britain adhere so rigidly, and which are so indispensable for peaceably practising our profession, to be deviated from here. This conviction has induced me respectfully to submit to the ordeal of your judgment the following correspondence and statement of facts. I cannot, however, conceal from you, that I take this step with most extreme reluctance; but several of the gentlemen of the profession in this city, as well as certain highly respectable patients of my own, having given me the most conclusive proofs that the correspondence I have alluded to, is handed about, and that comments in regard to it, not founded on fact, but injurious to my reputation, are in general circulation, I am therefore compelled to publish the whole in self-defence. That you may perfectly understand it, I have, with the full concurrence of Mr. James ——, my patient's husband, drawn up the following history of her case. As professional men, you will of course see the propriety of my having omitted her name, but Mr. James —— has with kind consideration authorised me to show the whole of the original correspondence to any medical gentleman, and for this purpose, I have placed it in the hands of Mr. Houston, House Surgeon of the Sydney Infirmary, where it may be seen.

CASE.

Having been called on the 16th December last, to pay a professional visit to Mrs. James ——, a young lady of a delicate habit of body, I found her labouring under acute inflammation of the knee joint, (synovitis) which was [illegible] red, hot, and very painful. I immediately ordered it to be covered with leeches, and having employed cathartics sufficiently, I gave her assiduously the solution of tartar emetic, as recommended by the distinguished Italian physicians Thomasini and Rasori. By these means, and the re-application of leeches, the inflammation of the joint was soon so much diminished that I thought myself justified in applying a blister to it; [illegible] this afforded very great relief; [illegible] it had only partially risen, I shortly afterwards applied another, which almost entirely removed the pain. As however pain was still complained of, and the joint continued enlarged and could not be extended, I ordered the patient to take calomel and opium, as recommended in such cases by Sir Astley Cooper, Baron Dupuytren, and other great practical modern surgeons. She took a grain of calomel and half a grain of opium every third hour for two days, when slight constitutional effect having been induced, the intervals were lengthened; on the third day I discontinued the use of the above described combination. The calomel and other remedies had however acted so beneficially, that on Sunday, the 11th ultimo, Mrs. James —— was in high spirits; her gums were no longer very tender, her appetite good, and the pain quite gone from the knee joint, except when she sometimes gave it a jerk on awakening from sleep. In fact she was doing so well that I told her husband, Mr. James ——, that I did not consider it necessary to see her oftener than every alternate day. Accordingly I did not pay her a visit on the 12th January, but did on the 13th, when I found her doing as well as I could desire. On the 14th I did not see her, but intended, according to agreement, to pay her a visit on the 15th. Before however I commenced making my round of visits on that day, Mr. James —— came to me and informed me that Mrs. James —— had become worse than ever; when I saw her I immediately became convinced that she had taken cold in consequence of exposing herself while still under the influence of calomel to a thorough draught, caused by an open door and window, against the effects of which I had repeatedly cautioned her. She had deep seated pains all over the limb, and the joint was enlarged, hot, and intensely painful, but the pulse, as often happens in these cases, was not much accelerated. I lost no time in having six dozen leeches applied to the joint, and ordered a powerful cathartic. It was my intention to have followed up this with vigorous treatment (if necessary) on the following day, in the fullest confidence of its being attended by a successful result, but when Mr. James —— came to my house early on the morning of that day, and informed me that Mrs. —— was still in very great pain, and that her relatives had become so alarmed about her that they desired to have the opinion of a second medical man on her case; I said I should be most happy to invite any gentleman who might be most agreeable to them to a consultation, and Mr. Bland having been named I forthwith wrote a note to him, in answer to which I received the friendly communication of which the following is a copy:—

(LETTER No. 1.)

12 o'clock.

My dear Sir,—I shall have much pleasure in meeting you at 3 (three) this afternoon. I fear I can hardly arrange for an earlier hour. Should I not hear from you, I shall take it for granted that this will equally suit your convenience, and as you have not mentioned the address I will call on the way, so that we can go together.

Most truly yours,
(Signed) W. Bland.

Dr. M'Crae, &c., &c.
16th January, 1846.

Whilst Mr. Bland and myself were driving to Mrs. James ——'s residence, at the Surry Hills, I narrated to him the history of her case, and told him what I had already done, and what I intended to do in the way of treatment of it. The plan I proposed was to put a very large blister on the leg, a short distance below the knee, and by exciting a free discharge of pus from the part by means of unguentum infusi cantharidis of the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia or savine ointment, to [illegible] (if I may use the term) the inflammation of the joint. The knee itself I wished not to blister, as the heat and pain in it were then too great to make this a safe measure, and also because it seemed advisable to keep the skin covering it in such a state as to enable me to command inflammation by the repeated application of leeches, lotions, &c. I then spoke of the propriety of using cathartics, and hinted that calomel and opium might be again required. When Mr. Bland and I saw my patient, we found her complaining of very great pain in the right knee, which was slightly red, hot, and considerably swollen; she had also those pains in the bones which are so often noticed in persons who have caught cold while under the influence of mercury. Tongue tolerably clean. Pulse 130 and compressible; but this elevation evidently principally caused by the alarm in which she seemed to be about her state. After seeing Mrs. James ——, Mr. Bland and I retired to her dining room for the purpose of consultation; we were alone, and I took care to [illegible] the door, that no one might hear our conversation. On asking him if he sanctioned the plan of treatment which I had proposed, he said that he did not;—that he considered my patient to be in the greatest danger; and that no time should be lost in pencilling the whole limb with diluted tincture of iodine, as this alone could give her a chance of recovery, or words to that effect. At first, gentlemen, I could hardly believe him to be in earnest; but [illegible] soon convinced me of this by resolutely objecting to every part of my proposed plan of treatment—even to giving a cathartic. Feeling it painful to differ from Mr. Bland, and feeling also most powerfully that no consideraations of courtesy ought to make me act contrary to my conviction, where human life was concerned, I therefore would not concur with him; but proposed, in an amicable manner, that a third medical man should be called in to decide between us. To this he, after some slight hesitation, agreed; and mentioned Mr. ———; but I pointedly objected to him, saying that he had treated me unhandsomely, and that I therefore did not wish to meet him. I then named Drs. — and Richardson; but as Mr. Bland said that he was not in the habit of meeting the former, it was finally agreed on that Mr. Richardson should be called in to decide between us in Mrs. James ——'s case. Mr. Bland then requested me to communicate with Mr. Richardson, and to let him know by a note, before eight o'clock in the evening, what hour would suit; and that if he (Mr. B.) did not hear from me before that time, he would understand that Mr. Richardson and myself were to call on him at his house, whence we should all go together to see the patient. Engagements prevented me from seeing Mr. Richardson early in the evening, and as he happened to be dining out, it was past eight o'clock before we reached Mr. Bland's house. On enquiring for him there we were informed that he had left home at half-past seven, and had not returned since. When Dr. Richardson and I arrived at Mr. James ——'s house, that gentleman himself opened the door to us, and immediately informed me that Mr. Bland had been there for a long time, and had persuaded him to send for Mr. ———. I took no notice of this at the moment, but on entering the room where Mr. Bland was, I asked him why he had not waited at his house for Mr. Richardson and myself, and he said that he had done so till past eight o'clock. After seeing Mrs. James ——, we retired for the purpose of consultation, when such a scene took place which, after being twenty-four years in the profession, I have never witnessed, and I hope I never may again. From about nine o'clock in the evening till one o'clock in the morning we continued arguing about this case—Mr. Bland endeavouring to get Mr. Richardson to adopt his Iodine plan of treatment, and I the more vigorous one before mentioned. In consequence, apparently, of the amiable desire of our umpire to avoid giving offence to either of us, the discussion was prolonged, and it might have been so for hours more, if I (despairing of any adjustment of our differences being come to) had not left the consultation for the purpose of mentioning this to my patient's husband, who I knew was anxiously waiting to learn our decision. I met him at the door of the room, which he entered with me, and at once earnestly entreated that we would come to some decision about Mrs. ———, as she was suffering very great pain; and Mr. Bland then, before Mr. Richardson and my patient's husband, denounced my treatment of the case as having been improper, stated that Mrs. James ——'s life was in great danger, that his plan of treatment would alone save her, and that it ought to have been adopted three weeks earlier; and that whatever plan we now adopted, that ultimately we would be forced to resort to his. Now, gentlemen, could such conduct be deemed decorous, or according to the usages of our profession in any part of the world? As Mr. Bland spoke under the excitement of passion, and being desirous not to be deemed quarrelsome, or to come to an open breach with my professional brother without having very strong reasons for so doing, I therefore forgave him, and we parted amicably. Before doing so, it was agreed that the following plan of treatment in Mrs. James ——'s case should be adopted: An anodyne draught immediately, to allay nervous irritation, &c.; a large blister to be applied to the calf of the leg, and kept open; cloths dipped in a saturnine lotion, containing a little laudanum, to be kept constantly on the inflamed knee. Dr. Richardson would on no account permit the diluted tincture of Iodine to be put on this joint, but he consented that those parts of the limb not covered by the blister or the lotion should be pencilled with it. I could not object to this, but felt satisfied that water would have been equally efficacious under the circumstances. However, this is only my opinion; but with deference I submit it to the profession.

Having remained at my patient's residence after the departure of Messrs. Richardson and Bland, for the purpose of giving some directions, I was shocked to learn from Mr. James —that Mr. Bland had come to his house before eight o'clock, the time agreed on for our consultation, that he had conversed with him a long time alone; had denounced my practice as improper, &c., and had recommended him to send for Mr. ——— also, that he had been in my patient's sick chamber—had alarmed her fears, &c., &c. Now I did forgive Mr. Bland for what he said in the heat of passion in my presence, but this most unprofessional conduct and cold-blooded endeavour to destroy the confidence of my patient's family in my skill I could not forgive; and, therefore at once told Mr. James —— that I could not meet Mr. Bland again, and that I would write to him to that effect, which I did in the following terms:

(LETTER 2.)
Dr. M'Crae to Mr. Bland.
Sydney, 17th January, 1846.

Sir,—Circumstances were communicated to me last night, after Dr. Richardson and yourself left the house of my patient, Mrs. James ——, which compel me with much pain, but as a duty which I owe to myself and my profession, to decline again meeting you in consultation.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
F. M'CRAE.

To Wm. Bland, Esq., &c.

(LETTER No. 3.)
In reply to the above—
Mr. Bland to Dr. M'Crae,
"Half-past 2 P.M.

"Sir,—In reply to your note of to-day, which I have just received, I have to request that you will be pleased to inform me of the circumstances which you state were communicated to you after Dr. Richardson and myself left the house of your patient—Mrs. James ——, last night.

I have the honour to be,
Yours most obediently,
WILLIAM BLAND

Dr. M'Crae, &c., &c.

(LETTER No. 4.)
Dr. M'Crae to Mr. Bland.
Sydney, 17th January, 1846.

Sir,—In answer to your letter of to-day, I beg to inform you that the circumstances which were communicated to me, after Dr. Richardson and yourself had left the house of my patient—Mrs. James ——, last night, and which led to the determination I have formed—not to meet you again in consultation, were in substance as follows:—

1st. That you visited my patient—Mrs. James ——, before the time appointed by previous arrangement for holding a consultation with Dr. Richardson and myself regarding her case.

2nd. That then, and in my absence, you went into her sick chamber, remained there for a considerable time, alarmed her fears, denounced my treatment as insufficient, and recommended your own as that which could alone subdue her disease.

3rd. That before the arrival of Dr. Richardson and myself, and consequently without my knowledge or consent, you recommended and persuaded my patient's husband to call in for consultation another medical gentleman, and he one with whom I had pointedly informed you I did not wish to meet, and all this after it had been agreed between us that Dr. Richardson should decide what the treatment of my patient ought to be.

The whole of the above conduct being opposed to that recognised etiquette which is so indispensable in the profession, I am with extreme regret compelled to repeat the determination I have already communicated to you.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant
F. M'CRAE.

For Wm. Bland, Esq., M.C., &c.

Early in the forenoon of the 18th January, and before I had received any reply to the above, Mr. James ——— called at my house, and told me that he had found, on enquiry, that Mr. Bland had not been in his wife's sick chamber as he has represented to me; but as she had repeated to him exactly the purport of the conversation Mr. Bland had alone with him in his dining-room before the arrival of Drs. Richardson and myself, he naturally implied such to have been the case (it appears that Mr. Bland was in Mr. James ——'s house before that gentleman's arrival from his place of business in Sydney.) As Mr. James —— had accused Mr. Bland unjustly on one point, I requested him to sit down and write me a letter to that effect, that I would forward it to that gentleman. The erroneous information I had received I considered to be a matter between him and Mr. Bland, and as the gravamen of my charge against the latter—that of denouncing my practice as improper, to Mr. James ——, was in no way lessened (for it signified little to me whether he deprived me of a patient, and injured my professional reputation through the wife or husband,) I therefore sent Mr. James ——'s letter to Mr. Bland, with the following one—No. 5, from myself.

(LETTER No. 5.)
Doctor M'Crae to Mr. Bland.
Sydney, 18th January, 1846.

Sir,—I beg to send you the enclosed letter I have just received from Mr. James ———, which, however, in no degree affects the determination I have come to.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
F. M'CRAE.

Wm. Bland, Esq., M.C., &c., &c.

(ENCLOSURE OF LETTER No. 5.)
Sydney, Sunday morning,
18th January, 1846.

Sir,—In reference to communications I made to you as my wife's medical attendant, relating to Dr. Bland's having been in her chamber and alarming her as to the state of her health, &c., I beg now to mention, that on further inquiry, I have ascertained that such was not the case; but from her being much alarmed, and mentioning exactly the purport of the conversation that gentleman had with me in my dining-room, I naturally inferred such to have been the case.

Mrs. ———, I regret to say, positively refuses to give up her authority, and I therefore can only infer that our conversation must have been overheard and conveyed to my poor wife.

I am, Sir,
Yours, very truly,
JAMES ———.

To Dr. M'Crae.

My patient having pledged her word to secrecy, very properly would not give up her authority; but I have ascertained that it was a lady and no servant who communicated Mr. Bland's opinion to her; but how the lady became in possession of it I will not inquire.

(No. 6.)
Mr. Bland to Dr. M'Crae.
Half-past 11 A.M.,
January 18, 1846.

Sir,—In reply to your communication of last night, which I received at half-past ten, after I had retired, in answer to mine of half-past two P.M., I beg to say that your first statement is incorrect, I did not visit your patient Mrs. James—— before the time appointed for meeting Dr. Richardson and yourself. As to your second complaint, whoever be your informant it is a tissue of gross unfounded falsehood, without even one solitary sprinkling of truth; I never saw your patient during your absence, consequently you must know that I never alarmed her fears, or denounced to her your treatment as inefficient, or recommended my own to her as that which could alone subdue her disease. I never saw your patient but twice—the first time in your own presence, the second in the presence of Dr. Richardson and yourself. On both occasions we entered and left the patient's room together, and not one single remark or animadversion escaped my lips during either of those visits in the presence of your patient. With respect to your third complaint, I did not recommend and persuade your patient's husband to call in another medical gentleman; but on unexpectedly hearing from the husband that two other medical gentlemen were to meet me, one of whom, when you had previously suggested his name, I had stated to you I was not in the habit of meeting, the other a perfect stranger to me, I merely suggested to the husband, as the numbers were increased, it would be as well if another medical gentleman, whom I named, and whom you do not object to meet, should be called in also. This fact you were made aware of immediately on our meeting, when I also furnished you with the reasons of my suggestion previously to my accompanying Dr Richardson and yourself up stairs to visit your patient, consequently it could not, as you state in your first letter, have been a new fact to you after Dr. Richardson and myself had left.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Yours, obediently,
W. BLAND.

To Dr. M'Crae, &c., &c.

I had written another letter to Mr. Bland, (enclosure of letter numbered 8), with the view of showing that the mistake into which my patient's husband led me, did not materially extenuate his (Mr. Bland's) professional conduct, when I received from him the following most singular production, in which he assumes that an admission of a mistake which merely charges the witness of his outrageously unprofessional conduct from the patient to the patient's husband, is sufficient to disprove the several charges I have brought against him, while in reality it does not essentially disprove one of them. It is also as remarkable as it is disingenious, that in all his correspondence with me, Mr. Bland takes no notice whatever of gravamen of my charge against him, viz.:—that he, when alone with my patient's husband, did denounce my treatment of her case as improper, &c., although in Mr. James ———'s communication, (enclosure to letter numbered 5), this fact is most distinctly stated by that gentleman.

(LETTER No. 7.)
Mr. Bland to Dr. M'Crae.
9 A.M., January 19, 1846.

Sir,—Having, according to your own showing, agreeably to your last communication and its enclosure (of yesterday), disproved your several charges, I shall now only say that a person who could prefer such grave accusations against another on mere gossip (and even that gossip on investigation being admitted to be false) without being sensible of and apologising for his misconduct, can be considered by me only as a disreputable character, and is, in my opinion, unworthy of the appellation of a gentleman.

This letter should have been sent yesterday, but for the press of unavoidable professional business.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Yours, obediently,
W. BLAND.

To Dr. F. M'Crae, &c., &c.

On receiving the above letter, I was induced to place myself in the hands of an experienced friend, who was of opinion that as the dispute was one of a professional nature, it ought to be decided by the rules of professional etiquette, and that any other mode of settling it, though it might divert attention from Mr. Bland's extraordinary conduct as a medical man, was under all the circumstances uncalled for and improper. Acting under his advice, which was sanctioned by that of several friends, I sent Mr. Bland the following letter, No. 8, together with its enclosure, which last as I before mentioned, I had prepared previous to the receipt of his last communication.

(LETTER No. 8.)
Dr. M'Crae to Mr. Bland.
Sydney, January 19th, 1846,
Half-past 2 P.M.

Sir,—The enclosed letter was composed before I received your extraordinary communication of this morning—so extraordinary that I resolved to consult a friend as to how I ought to reply to you. The result of that consultation is the transmission to you of this enclosure, whilst in answer to your note of this morning, I beg to say that I entirely agree with you in thinking, that the person who could, without foundation, prefer such grave charges against another as I have done against you, as stated in my second communication, modified and explained by Mr. James ——'s letter, of which I send you the original, as well as made more fully manifest by the enclosed, is "in my opinion unworthy of the appellation of a gentleman."

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
F. M'CRAE.

For Wm., Bland, Esq., M.C., &c.

(ENCLOSURE OF LETTER No. 8.)
Sydney, January 19, 1846.
8 o'clock, A.M.

Sir,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday afternoon, which professional engagements prevented me from answering sooner.

The written communication from Mr. James ———, which I sent yesterday, proves that he was mistaken in supposing that you were in my patient's sick chamber without my presence; but it and his verbal testimony prove beyond a doubt, that you, whom I had called in, in consultation, did in my absence endeavour to destroy that confidence which my employer Mr. James —— had in me, by alarming his fears about his wife, by denouncing my practice as improper, and recommending your own as that which alone could subdue her disease. This fact being established (beyond a doubt, would justify me in the eyes of the profession in all parts of the world from again meeting you in consultation. In reference to your having in my absence recommended Mr. James —— to call in Mr. ———, on the ground of his having informed you that Drs. ——— and Richardson were to be present at the consultation, I have only to say, that such an idea was never entertained. Mr. James —— would have preferred Dr. ———, because he had known his wife's father, but as you and he do not meet, of course this could not be arranged. When the question of obtaining a third opinion was discussed, the names of several gentlemen in the profession were mentioned, and it was finally agreed between us that Dr. Richardson should decide as to the treatment to be pursued in Mrs. ———'s case. Among the names mentioned was that of Mr. ———, but I decidedly objected to him, and said to you that I did not wish to meet him, as I conceived he had behaved unhandsomely to me. You, therefore, were fully aware of this; and yet, although called in for consultation by myself, you did suggest in my absence to my patient's husband that the gentleman whom I did not wish to meet should be invited to meet me. I beg here to remark that it was I who charged you before Dr. Richardson with suggesting that Mr. ——— should be called in, and not you who mentioned it first, as your letter implies, further than that just before Dr. Richardson and yourself left Mr. James ——'s house (at nearly one o'clock in the morning) some remark was made that I would not meet Mr. ———, to which I immediately replied that I never said that I would not meet him, but that I did not wish to do so; for a contingency might arise, (though this is most unlikely) which might induce me to sacrifice personal feeling at the earnest request of a patient.

As to your having gone to Mr. James ——'s house before the time fixed on to consult with Dr. Richardson and myself there, I beg merely to lay before you the following facts, without presuming in any way to make reflections on them, being perfectly willing to believe that your watch had given wrong time. It was agreed between us that I was to see Dr. Richardson and communicate with you in writing about the time for the consultation before eight o'clock at night, and that if I did not do so you gave me to understand that you would be home at that time to accompany Dr. Richardson and myself to the patient's residence; as Dr. Richardson was out at dinner, I could not succeed in finding him till it was after eight. Having done so we repaired together to your house, where, on enquiry for you, we were informed by Mr. Smeathman (and of this Dr. Richardson has a distinct recollection) that you had gone out at half-past seven, and had not returned home since; when Dr. Richardson and I arrived at Mr. James ——'s, I asked you why you had not waited for us, and you answered that you had done so till past eight o'clock. Now Mr. James —— positively declares that you were at his house before eight o'clock.

I have the honour to be,
&c., &c.,
F. M'CRAE.

William Bland, Esq.

To the above letter, and that preceding it, Mr. Bland never made any reply, and he acted wisely in so doing, for he must have said something about the statement in Mr. James ——'s letter of his having while alone with that gentleman denounced my practice as improper, &c. I meant to have dismissed the matter for ever from my mind and to have gone on peaceably to practice my profession (if that be possible in Sydney), when I ascertained on undoubted authority that my correspondence with Mr. Bland was shown about, and that comments were made on certain parts of it, contrary to fact, and injurious to my reputation; which being the case, I wrote a letter to my patient's husband, Mr. James ——, to which he returned me answers which are contained in the following communication:—

(LETTER No. 9.)
Sydney, 4th February, 1846.
10 o'clock, A.M.

Dear Sir,—In answer to your letter of last evening's date, I beg to make the following statement, to the correctness of which I am ready to make oath.

1st. That Dr. Bland did arrive at my house before eight P.M. on the 16th ultimo, and that he did then, and before the arrival of yourself and Dr. Richardson, whilst sitting alone with me in my dining-room, inform me that the treatment pursued by you in my wife's case was improper, that her life was in the greatest danger, and that a totally different treatment, which he should recommend, must be adopted, and should have been employed three weeks earlier.

2. That Dr. Bland requested me to ask Dr. ——— to the consultation on Mrs. ——'s case: this he did before you arrived, and before eight o'clock P.M.

3. That I was not present at any consultation with Dr. Bland and yourself in the early part of the same day, nor had I ever met or spoken to Dr. Bland until at the time before mentioned, viz., the evening of the 16th ultimo.

Dr. Bland having been called in by you at my request, I felt it to be my duty to make you acquainted with Dr. Bland's opinions as expressed to me.

I have only to add that you are at liberty to make any use of this letter you may think fit.

I am, dear Sir,
Yours truly,
JAMES ———.

To F. M'Crae, Esq., M.D.

In my remarks prefatory to this correspondence, I gave an exact statement of my patient's case, with my proposed mode of treatment, and that recommended by Mr. Bland, and I have now to add, that as soon as I signified to my patient's husband my determination not to meet Mr. Bland again in consultation, he lost no time in sending him his fees, and Mrs James ——— was left to the care of Dr. Richardson and myself. When that gentleman and I next met, we agreed that the diluted tincture of iodine, with which those parts of the limb not covered by the blister or lotion had been pencilled according to Mr. Bland's wish, should be discontinued, as being a remedy not suited to the circumstances of the case. Dr. Richardson and myself then entirely concurred in the treatment, which, I am happy to say, proved so efficacious that in the space of five days changes so marked in my patient's state took place that Dr. Richardson did not consider it necessary to visit her afterwards. As, however, the knee joint was still contracted, and the pain not quite gone, he sanctioned my proposal to give her calomel and opium till her system became slightly influenced. This remedy produced such good effects that I was soon enabled to place the patient's limb in one of Liston's fracture splints, where, by means of the screw, I gradually, and without giving pain, straightened the knee. In this stage I applied a blister to the anterior part of the leg below that joint, and kept it open by means first of the Unguentum Infusi Cantharides of the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia, and subsequently by the Unguentum Subinæ, while at the same time I gave as much plain nourishing diet as could be taken. Finally I applied blisters to the knee itself. The result of my treatment is, that my patent has been convalescent for a considerable period, and when last I saw her, about five days ago, I was gratified by her informing me, that not only the inflammation of the knee was entirely removed, but that she never in her life till now knew what it was to enjoy good health, that her appetite and spirits were excellent, &c., &c., which she attributed entirely to the effects of the slight course of calomel and the other treatment which she had last undergone.

I now respectfully submit to you, my professional brethren of Australia, whether tincture of iodine diluted with two parts of spirits, and applied externally, could have produced such results?

It would be a waste of time as well as an insult to the feelings and judgment of the profession to comment much upon the facts detailed in the above correspondence, which may be briefly summed up as follows:—Mr. Bland is called in by me in consultation on the state of one of my patients; he disagrees as to the plan of treatment; a third party, as is customary in such cases, is invited to decide between us, and an hour is fixed when we are to meet at Mr. Bland's house. In disregard of this arrangement Mr. Bland proceeds alone to the house of my patient, before the proposed time, and in my absence denounces my treatment to her husband in the most unqualified terms—states that her life is in danger, and that a mode of treatment of his own must be adopted, as that which can alone save her life; and that it ought to have been adopted three weeks earlier. He further, and in my absence, proposes to send for a fourth medical man, and he, one whom I had previously declined to call in at his suggestion.

I shall say nothing of the obvious false assumptions on which Mr. Bland grounds his defence in the letter numbered 6; or the disingenuous manner in which in No. 7 he twists the acknowledged mistake respecting the patient's chamber into a "disproval of my several charges," when it does not, in any essential degree, disprove one of them.

In conclusion, I fearlessly leave to you my treatment of Mrs. James ———'s case; but this is to me a subject of minor moment—the great question now under my consideration is, whether one medical man differing from another in a matter purely professional is to be dragged into a personal collision in reference to the same. So strongly do I feel in this case, and so clearly do I see, the desire which Mr. Bland has evinced to conceal under the smoke of gunpowder, an act which you must admit would send him to Coventry amongst any body of the profession in Britain, that I would not allow a precedent to be established which would render to a medical man in these colonies a case of pistols as indispensable as a case of lancets.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,

FOREST LODGE SHRUBBERY AND GROUNDS.

AT THE GLEBE, ADJOINING
THE ARCHDEACONRY ESTATE.
BY MR. STUBBS.

THIS INCOMPARABLE Freehold Villa, to be sold by public auction,
ON MONDAY, THE 6TH DAY OF APRIL, 1846,
At the Mart, King-street,
At twelve o'clock precisely,

Deserves a more vivid description than would fall to the lot of its less fortunate contemporaries.

You enter it by a road at the corner of Hereford House, passing Mr. Want's residence on the left, and Mr. Porter's pretty cottage on the right. The drive along the side line is ornamented with every variety of "exotics," and it terminates at the lawn, when the senses are gratified with all that can be admired of nature and art.

Its design and aspect is worthy of the liberality and taste of the original proprietor, who (it is said) expended nearly £1000 upon its erection and completion, and made it everything a family can desire.

The suite of rooms are neatly corniced, and the cabinet work is expensively executed; the whole is protected by an L Verandah, upwards of 120 feet promenade.

They comprise—1. Drawing-room, 17 feet 9 inches by 15 feet; dining-room, 19 feet 9 inches by 15 feet, with handsome French lights opening into the verandah, and the circular lawn in front; hall, 15 feet 4 inches by 6 feet; sitting-room, 18 feet 4 inches by 12 feet; first bed-room, 11 feet 9 inches by 14 feet 6 inches; second bed-room, 11 feet 9 inches by 14 feet 6 inches; children's bed-room, 15 feet 2 inches by 8 feet 6 inches; library, 7 feet by 8 feet; two butlers' pantries, 7 feet 6 inches by 7 feet; kitchen, 15 feet 6 inches by 12 feet 10 inches.

The Shrubbery and Garden is profusely embellished. The sunbeams no sooner irradiate the east than they reflect thereon, and influence vegetation, spreading an appearance of happiness Paradisical.

The out-houses are extensive and well planned, and are in immediate connection with a private road left for the admittance of servants and messengers, &c.

In fact, within and without every thing corresponds, and it may be safely affirmed that FOREST LODGE is one of the most delightful chateaus throughout the suburbs of Sydney.

Ground plan of the Lodge, with illustrations of the shrubbery and grounds, by Mr. Surveyor Armstrong, may be seen at the Mart, King-street.

For the title parties are respectfully referred to R. J. Want, Esq., Solicitor, &c., Pitt-street,

A GOOD GRAZING FARM.

MR. JEREMIAH LEDSAM has been honoured with instructions from Lieutenant Thomas Caswell, R.N., to sell by public auction, at the Royal Hotel, George-street, Sydney,
ON THURSDAY, THE 26TH DAY OF MARCH, 1846,
At 12 o'clock noon,

A superior GRAZING FARM, comprising 640 acres, situate midway on the road from Raymond Terrace to Port Stephens, at the Australian Agricultural Company's Farms at Burrell and Stroud, in the County of Gloucester, and is on the usual route to New England and the interior stations northward, Port Macquarie, &c. Its roadside position renders it peculiarly eligible as a site at which to erect suitable premises for an Inn; to the enterpriser it would prove a most successful and profitable speculation, and to the public a source of great convenience.

The Farm having nearly a mile of the termination of the Wallaroo Creek within the sectional lines, is favoured with that most essential recommendation—a never failing supply of good water.

Considerable improvements have been made, consisting in fencing 800 or 900 rods in sectional lines, divided into paddocks, supplied with water by the Wallaroo Creek. Upwards of thirty acres are partially stumped and cleared. There are also erected upon the land a stock-yard, milking bails, dairy, one hut with two rooms, weather-boarded and floored; one large slab hut, barked roof, (at present uncovered).

The farm is well adapted to the cultivation of the vine, and adjoins the land of Captain Crawford, and the well-selected and extensive property of Richard Windeyer, Esq., M.C.

Upon this valuable Estate upwards of £300 have been expended by the present proprietor.

Title—purchased from the Crown, [illegible] free of quit-rent or any other claims; but subject to the government conditions of the original deeds.

TERMS:

25 per cent. cash; 10 per cent. deposit upon the fall of the hammer; and 15 per cent. within one month from the day of sale. The residue may remain secured on the property for fourteen years, if required, at 8 per cent. interest.
